Bisou

BISOU GALLERY

Julien Rademaker (1978) is a curator and designer known for his eclectic taste and his ability to transform the traditional gallery experience. At the heart of his work is a commitment to showcasing artists and their creations in intimate, thoughtfully curated environments. In these spaces, where diverse artistic perspectives and mediums converge, each piece enhances the other, creating a harmonious dialogue that feels both personal and engaging.

Based in Amsterdam's eastern docklands, Bisou Gallery embodies Julien's vision: a warm and approachable space where established and emerging artists meet. The collection spans paintings, prints, ceramic objects, and design pieces, always with an eye for the unique and the visually captivating.

Julien's work is driven by a belief in the transformative power of art, where the spirit of a piece—its ability to evoke emotion, challenge the mundane, and inspire new perspectives—takes center stage. Beyond the gallery, he extends this philosophy to hotels and private interiors, curating spaces that feel alive and deeply personal. Whether designing a hotel collection or helping someone discover their first artwork, his aim is consistent: to bring art into everyday life in ways that inspire joy, spark curiosity, and start conversations.

Bisou Gallery curates exceptional artworks that are featured in private collections around the world, as well as in the interiors of prestigious hotels and offices.

'My House is Your House offers Bisou the chance to expand its reach and present Antwerp with a curated selection of extraordinary artists whose work continues to inspire and surprise me, all within a space that is both historically significant and creatively vibrant.'

A New Space to Work, Show, Talk

12 is a project by AIM EU that has revitalised a registered Art Nouveau gem (1907) located at Kattendijkdok Oostkaai 12 in Antwerp. Through this regeneration project, AIM showcases that even subtle interventions can yield profound impacts on spaces and their surroundings. The renewed space not only preserves the building's historic beauty but also establishes itself as a creative and cultural hub, aiming to bridge Eastern and Western influences. 12 is envisioned as a mixed-use building, encompassing an exhibition space, a café, an event venue, and the studio's creative offices.

'Our purpose is to bridge cultures through design, art, events, and community engagement. We envision becoming the go-to place globally, blending cultures, sparking creativity, and leaving an imprint on urban landscapes. Our mission is to surround ourselves with passionate and creative minds eager to make positive impacts on the cityscape with us.'

'Inviting Bisou to takeover 12 is a unique opportunity to explore how art and architecture intersect. 12, through its history and restoration, becomes a canvas, where the two disciplines coexist in dialogue, creating a new environment that sparks new connections and perspectives.'

– Wendy Saunders and Vincent De Graaf

AIM

12 is initiated by AIM Architecture EU, a collective of passionate, international individuals. Founded by Belgian and Dutch architects Wendy Saunders and Vincent de Graaf in 2005, AIM brings together architecture with interior and product design to create wholly integrated products and ideas. Headquartered in Shanghai and with offices in Chicago and now also in Antwerp, AIM is a global studio with local feeling. Our approach is deliberate and focused. Each project is approached individually. We pair context to concept and explore the fine line between vision and practicality. The result are unique spaces with a powerful narrative. Bold, playful, and gritty. Well-built projects with refined details. A built-in love of materials, and passion for place and purpose.
