New four-legged model extends LD Seating's popular Flexi Light chair series

Conceived in Italy, sustainably made in the Czech Republic.

LD Seating introduces a new addition to Flexi Light, one of the company's most popular series. Designed by Orlandini Design, the latest model features a sleek four-legged base, offering the elegant design features that define Flexi Light collection. Stackable and customisable, the new model is created with versatility in mind, making it ideal for offices, meeting rooms and modern spaces.

The entire production process is performed entirely at the Boskovice facilities, ensuring full quality control and a reduced environmental impact. By manufacturing the metal base and polyurethane foam shell in-house, LD Seating minimises waste, avoids unnecessary shipping emissions and optimises material use. When its long-life cycle eventually comes to an end, the chair's materials are highly recyclable, supporting a more circular approach to furniture design.

Customisation remains key. The new model of Flexi Light chair comes in eight powder coating shades and a selection of fabric and leatherette upholstery options to create a bold monochrome statement or a striking contrast to complement any interior.

With a minimalist aesthetic, sustainable design and practical functionality, the four-legged Flexi Light chair brings a new level of adaptability to the series.
